BIRTHDAY SOCIAL AND AN ADDRESS

The Birthday Social given by the Ladies' Aid Society of Trinity Church on Monday evening last was a decided success. A very enjoyable program consisting of recitations and vocal and instrumental music was presented. A marked feature of the entertainment was the singing of Miss Evelyn Rockwell the young daughter of Mr. Ferdinand Rockwell. Although a mere child she possesses a voice of remarkable sweetness and compass which captivated the entire audience who were not content until she responded to an encore. We predict for this young lady a brilliant future. During the proceedings the following address from the Quarterly Official Board of the Church was presented to the retiring pastor:

Rev. G. W. McColl, B.A., B.D. :

Dear Sir and Bro.,—At the last meeting of the Quarterly Official Board of Trinity Methodist Church a resolution was unanimously passed to tender to you their appreciation of your service as pastor for the past four years and to prepare a letter accordingly and present it to you. Acting in accordance with the above resolution we wish to say that we fail to find words which would suitably give expression to the appreciation of Trinity Church congregation. By your scholarship and ability and your zeal for God's work you have in the

STRATHCONA.

The crops are looking fine. The hay will be about the average, and roots and grain are looking fine, the farmer has no cause to complain yet this season.

Our pathmaster has greatly improved our roads by putting on a fine coat of gravel.

Our old reliable baseball player is trying to organize a ball team. It will not be old faithful's fault if he does not succeed.

R. A. Pybus, of Montreal, spent Sunday with his family here.

Miss Maud Bowyer, of Belleville, was the guest of her uncle, Mr. John Grange, on Thursday last.

Miss Mabel Heintyleman, of Watertown, N. Y., is the guest of her cousin, Miss Myrtle Ballance.

Town ladies visiting Strathcona may rest assured that their baggage will be promptly delivered.

Edward Hanes has returned from Belleville where he was spending a few days, visiting relatives.

Mr. Leon Hooper, of Perry, N. Y., who has been visiting relatives here for the past two weeks left for his home on Sunday.

A number from here attended the lawn social at Newburgh on Thursday evening.

Mrs. Geo. Dunlop spent Monday in Napanee.

We are sorry to learn that our teacher Miss Effie Long, is to leave us. I am sure the pupils and parents of the section all sincerely regret her departure as it is hard to secure as good a teacher.

Mrs. Wm. Haycock is visiting her sister, Mrs. Jas. Kelly, who is in extremely poor health.

Mr. Alf. Knight and niece, Mrs. Carson, of Napanee, were the guests of Mrs. Margaret Lott on Sunday last.

Miss Ruth Fairbairn, of Centreville, is spending a few days the guest of Mrs. Ed. Rook.

cordingly and present it to you. Acting in accordance with the above resolution we wish to say that we fail to find words which would suitably give expression to the appreciation of Trinity Church congregation. By your scholarship and ability and your zeal for God's work you have in the pulpit given us each week food for our souls and lessons to teach us the better life and how to walk in the paths of righteousness and truth: rightly interpreting the Word of God so that your sermons have been interesting, instructive and spiritually beneficial. You have also sustained the best and truest ideals of Methodism: the standard which indelibly makes its mark on our day and generation. In your pastoral work you have labored consistently, patiently and successfully and we doubt if any pastor has left our midst, who has been more beloved or whose departure more regretted, by our congregation. We feel this is even more commendable when we recall that this has been the result of a conscientious desire exhibited by you at all times to lift men out of themselves to a realization of God's goodness and mercy and to give them the encouragement and cheer poor humanity requires in its struggles through life. We desire to point out that Trinity Church has not only maintained its strength during your pastorate but has, we believe, developed in its spiritual life and power for good. Your good wife and family will be greatly missed. Mrs. McColl has endeared herself to our congregation who recognize in her the helpmeet who is so necessary to the man of God wherever he may be placed. Her good deeds and womanly qualities have been an example to womankind and have done much to raise the standard of our ideals in different departments of our church. Your family will be missed but we are glad they are going to a sphere of usefulness where all the advantages for intellectual and social development will be afforded in a higher degree than we could hope to give and more especially as they will, under the careful parental supervision so well exercised in the past, come into the fuller enjoyment of the best advantages and receive corresponding benefits. Fond memories of the four years' stay of yourself and family in our midst will linger with us and we now wish you all God speed and happiness and success in the years to come.

Yours very sincerely,

W. F. Hall, Rec. Steward

A. C. Baker,

U. M. Wilson, Committee.

At the conclusion of the program the audience adjourned to the Dining Hall of the church where refreshments were served and an enjoyable hour spent in social intercourse.

The proceeds of the evening's entertainment was one hundred dollars.

A few days prior to the social Mrs. McColl was presented with a case of cutlery and silver, as a slight token of the esteem in which she is held by the congregation.

Mr. McColl and family left for their new home in Montreal on Wednesday carrying with them the best wishes not only from Trinity congregation but the entire community.

John Bird, moulder's assistant in the Canadian locomotive works, Kingston, suffered the loss of his right foot Monday afternoon, when a piece of steel was forced against it by a yard crane. His foot was almost severed above the ankle. The injured man was rushed to the Hotel Dieu, where doctors amputated the foot.

Felix Doyle, now serving life sentence at the Kingston penitentiary, for the murder of his mother, has written to a Brantford lawyer to take up his case to secure parole. Doyle, who was sentenced several years ago, reiterates that he is innocent of the crime, and states that he was always good to his mother. It is not likely that any effort will be made to effect his release.

Speaking at Belleville, W. B. Northrup, conservative M. P. for East Hastings entered a protest against the inaction that had characterized the Borden administration on the navy question since its advent to power. "It is time Canada stopped talking," said Mr. Northrup, "and did something. It is no feather in the cap of conservative party that they have been so long in power and nothing done."

The death occurred on a Bay of Quinte Railway train near Murvale on Thursday evening of last week of Mrs. Charles Ewart, of Tweed, who had gone to Kingston to consult with a specialist. She suffered from tumors in the windpipe, and an operation was discouraged. She and her husband left on the afternoon train for home. The young wife took a choking spell on the journey. The locomotive broke down at Tamworth, and the train did not reach Tweed till 2.30 o'clock Friday morning. Deceased formerly lived in Kingston with her husband. She was twenty-one years old, and leaves an infant child.

A sad drowning accident occurred at Kingston, on Monday afternoon, when Ivy, the five-year-old daughter of Mr. F. Day, Princess street, met death by falling into the water off Crawford's wharf at the foot of Princess street. Jos. Pound, who was passing, dived after the little tot and brought her to the surface. Dr. Anglin tried, with assistance, to resuscitate the child, who was barely alive, and almost succeeded, but the shock was too great and her little heart ceased to beat. The mother frantically watched the doctor use every effort to bring life back to the little body.

Mr. D. Watson, residing on Paudash road, near Badercroft, has had his flock of sheep depleted lately, undoubtedly by a bear. The other morning he found the carcass of a lamb partly eaten, and, thinking the bear might return in the evening, he shouldered a rifle and sauntered to where the carcass was lying, only to find bruin there before him, showing no sign of leaving until he had finished his repast. Watson had only three cartridges, and after firing apparently without effect, he was obliged to beat a retreat hastily, with the bear in pursuit. It gave up the chase when the vicinity of the house was reached. Next morning the body of the bear was found dead, all three shots having reached the mark. It weighed 345 pounds.

Field Marshal Sir George White, V. D., Governor of Chelsea Hospital, London's home for aged soldiers, and defender of Ladysmith during the South African War for 119 days, died Monday in his 77th year. The illustrious part of Sir George White played in the South African War marked him as one of the most distinguished figures in contemporary British military history. The seige of Ladysmith by the Boers commenced on November 2nd, 1899, and on the night of February 29th, Lord Dundonald, who was later head of the militia in Canada, with a force of about 600 men, consisting of the Natal Carbineers and a composite regiment, entered Ladysmith. Not for many years was there such rejoicing in all parts of the Empire. March 1st was declared a high holiday in Britain, and every part of Canada celebrated the raising of the long siege.

A beautiful young lady whose name was Darling Nellie Gray, lived in Maryland. Her father was by profession A Spanish Cavalier. His name was Solomon Levi. Her mother's name was Annie Laurie. The young lady was so lovely that she reminded one of The Flowers That Bloom in the Spring. A young man living in the next town met her one day, Comin' Thro' the Rye, and afterward often met, either In the Gloom or In the Shade of the Old Apple Tree. One night, as they listened to The Mocking Bird, he turned and said, "Love Me, and the World is Mine." Later in the Good Old Summer Time, they were married. The best man was Robin Adair, and the bridesmaids Two Little Girls in Blue. On their wedding trip they went sailing down The Danube River. Frequently they received letters from the Old Folks at Home, urging them to return to Amercia. Accordingly, after visiting Bonnie Dundee, where they listened to the Bluebells of Scotland, they returned to their Old Kentucky Home, saying, "Be It Ever so Humble, There is no Place Like Home."

Author of "The Verdict of the Heart," "A Heritage of Hate," "Nell of Shorne Mills," "Paid For," "A Modern Juliet," Etc.

There is a moment, the millionth part of a moment, before the hand of death crushes out all power of thought, when the past moves like a flash before the mental vision; and in that moment Vane saw and heard Nina as plainly as if she had been in the room with him. His lips formed her name and, half fighting, half resigning himself to the end, he closed his eyes. As he did so he heard in the intense, horrible silence, the turning of a key. "It comes too late," he thought; "I shall be dropped no longer!" But the sound was followed by a draught of fresh, of heavenly air; but he was only conscious of the figure of a woman dimly outlined in the dense fumes. She stood for a moment looking round, then noiselessly she sprang towards him. As she did so the garden door by which she had entered closed. She sprang from him to the rope, saw that it was broken, and, staggering, made for the garden door. By the time she had opened it Vane had recovered sufficiently to get to his feet and heavily, blunderingly, was moving towards her, when, as if she had suddenly thought of something, she ran to the furnace and, taking off the iron pot, poured out its contents. There should be no evidence against her beloved master. But her hand was unsteady, her whole frame, indeed, shaking, and some of the liquid fell into the furnace. The flame arose, piercing even the dim fumes, and lighting the room with a livid glare in which Vane saw her face and recognized Deborah. He saw something else that roused his bewildered senses with a quick horror; the flame had caught her dress, and she was on fire. Struggling fiercely with his weakness, he tore off his coat and wrapping it round her, essayed to drag her to the door. As he did so the burning liquid ran like a snake from the furnace and along the floor, caught the curtain, and in another moment the whole room seemed ablaze.

Vane struggled to the garden door, still grasping the inert figure. The silence, hers caused by her terrrible affliction, his from the fumes that filled his lungs, was weird and ghastly. They were like two demonic figures struggling through a nightmare of hell. Swaying this way and that, Vane reached the door at last. It was ajar, and he forced it with his weak, uncertain fingers, but even as he stood on the threshold his strength failed him, and as he fell outwards, his burden slipped from him, the door closed on its spring, and she was shut up in the burning room.

Vane fell down the steps heavily, and, rolling under one of the thick bushes, lay there senseless.

Letchford, still waiting for Vane,

and his question was echoed by the rest.

"Send—send the women away!" panted Letchford. "For God's sake send them away!"

They fell back, all but Lady Fanworthy and Lady Letchford. The men closed round her husband, then fell back also. In his hand he held the charred fragment of the thick smoking-jacket from which, gleamed through the smoke the big brass buttons.

"Oh, my God! Vane is dead!" cried Letchford.

Julian stood staring at it speechlessly for a moment; then he moved his head slowly. One of the women had come forward and was standing looking at him.

It was Judith Orme. Their eyes met for an instant, then she uttered a terrible cry and fell back in a swoon.

One does not recover from the deadly fumes of aconite, ammonia and other deadly chemicals very quickly. Vane lay unconscious beneath the sheltering bush until nearly the moment the flames were extinguished, and his senses came back so slowly that for some time he was incapable of any desire for life. At last he raised his head, gazed vaguely at the dense volume of smoke and steam in an uninterested fashion, and, still dazed, crawled weakly to a safer position. He lay there for some minutes, panting for breath and fighting for strength; then he rose to his feet with the intention of going to the assistance of the others; but suddenly he heard his name spoken. He stopped and put his hand to his head. What had happened? Why, yes, of course, he had been in that room, had been nearly burned. Nearly? At that moment Letchford's cry arose, "Vane is dead!" and pierced the thick air.

Vane stood quite still while one could count twenty; then, obeying an impulse that came as swiftly as a flash of lightning, he drew back into the shadow of the shrubbery.

He remained there for a moment, trying to think clearly, consecutively, then he passed through the other door of the ladies' garden and, keeping in the shadow of the wall, reached the common room of the stablemen.

It was empty—every one was gathered round the scene of the fire—and Vane, still striving for an effort at thought and resolution, took one of the jackets and caps which lay on the table, put them on, and, going through the yard, made his way towards the park.

and, rolling under one of the thick bushes, lay there senseless.

Letchford, still waiting for Vane, was knocking the ashes from his pipe when he saw a shaft of yellow light shoot across the opening between the curtains. He thought nothing of it for a moment or two, but as it grew more intense he drew the curtain aside and saw that the light came from some part of the house. His impulse was to open the window, but he remembered that a draught was, in cases of fire, an added peril, and he sprang to the door shouting for help. In an instant, as it seemed, the stairs were filled with people, the hall itself, while his shouts were joined by screams and cries of "Fire!"

Springing from the corridor leading to the Witch's Room came the tall figure of Julian. "Where? Where?" he cried.

Letchford gasped his answer. "I saw it from the smoking-room; it is on the west side!"

"It must be in your room, Mr. Julian," said Prance.

A cry, a sharp cry of horror, rose from the group of women. It came from Judith.

Julian's eyes went towards her and held hers for a moment, and she shrank and covered her face with her hands as if to shut out his gaze.

"We shall soon see!" he said, as he ran down the corridor so swiftly that before the rest could reach him he had unlocked the door and flung the key into the room.

Before the dense volume of smoke and the sheets of flame which, like a demon spirit rejoicing in the evil that it had done, poured out to meet them, the terrified throng fell back. It was Letchford who sprang forward, his arm across his face.

"Vane! Vane is in here! My God!" he cried. "Water! Water! No, no! Don't open the windows! The room is closed. Vane, oh, poor Vane!"

There was, of course, a "perfect system of appliances for meeting cases of fire" at Lesborough, and, equally of course, the perfect system broke down. Before the elaborate hose could be uncoiled and the water turned on and directed upon the burning room, it had been reduced to ashes; the other part of the wing was in flames, and the remainder of the building threatened. But every man worked with the energy of madness, and the women, too, bore their part. With Lady Fanworthy at their head they filled the buckets which the men passed from hand to hand.

It was over an hour before the flames were mastered and the house saved; then, though the smoke and steam were well nigh blinding, Letchford, followed by Julian, sprang and stumbled amidst the ruins and began their search.

Julian worked like a man possessed, tearing at the blocks of stone, the charred beams, the thick debris which hid the floor.

"He may have left the room!" he gasped, pausing for a moment, and wiping the sweat from his blackened face.

"God grant it!" gasped Letchford; then his voice broke with a groan and he staggered back with something gripped in his hand.

"What—what is it?" gasped Jul-

CHAPTER XXII.

After Nina had gone Sutcombe stood and stared at the sea and faced the music like a man—and a gentleman.

Decima had refused him: it was a bitter, hard blow. And yet, notwithstanding her entreaty that he would forget his proposal, was there no hope left for him? From her reiteration "You don't know, you don't know!" he inferred a mystery, a secret; and yet not much of a mystery, a secret, for what else could she mean but that she loved and was pledged to another man?

Anyway, by the explanation of her words, her almost anguished manner, what it might, he, Sutcombe, had to accept her refusal. In common courtesy he must refrain from pressing his suit while they three were alone on this desolate island and she was unable to keep out of his reach.

So he went back to his bed in the "saloon," unhappy and unsatisfied, but not altogether despairing; for, if she was pledged to another man, where was he, and why had he not put in an appearance all these months?

He rose in the morning, and, filling the role which Mannerling had so ably played, got some fuel, lit the fire, and went out with the gun to shoot some wild fowl.

When he came back he found the breakfast ready and the two girls awaiting him.

Nina glanced at him half timidly, but Sutcombe was not the man to whine or wear the willow, and he met her glance cheerfully and reassuringly; indeed, he was so cheerful that Vivienne, notwithstanding her acuteness, did not guess that he had asked his question and been rejected. Immediately after breakfast he set off with pick and shovel to the spot to which Nina directed him, the ladies promising to follow him directly they had "cleared away." Sutcombe walked by no means quickly, for what his heart desired was love and not gold; but after he had taken off his coat and been at work for some minutes, he was seized by a mild attack of the "yellow fever," and began to work with that enthusiasm which the gold-seeker alone experiences; so that when the two girls came slowly toward him, Vivienne supported by Nina's strong arm, they found him hot but exultant.

"You are quite right!" he said, pointing to the specks of yellow which shone dully amongst the heap of dirt and rock. "I'm not much of an authority, but even I can see that there is a large quantity of gold here!"

Nina nodded and caught something of his enthusiasm.

"I'll help you!" she said, brightly. "Oh, yes, give me the spade. I know how to handle it. I used—" She stopped suddenly, and Vivienne, who was seated in the shade of the rock, cut in eagerly:

"Why can't I help?"

"So you can!" said Sutcombe; "you shall sort out the pieces with the gold in them."

Having thus made a division of the labor, they worked almost in silence until Sutcombe and Nina had made a large heap and Vivienne a smaller but more valuable and precious one. Every now and then Sutcombe paused to wipe the sweat from his face—and glance at Nina; and he saw plainly enough that though she was working hard—far too hard for his taste—she was not thinking of the

"We were thrown toge by Fate—but—but he did for me. There—there was else—" She stopped and face away, calling to he burn up her tears.

The clasp of Vivienne's came a caress.

"And you, dear—you get! You love him still, are parted—"

Nina's head drooped and was answered. She thou brother.

"May I tell Sutcombe?" a low voice.

"Yes," said Nina; "plea I—I want him to unders that what he wishes can that I am bound—" meditation which comes to us when we feel a presence that we have neither heard nor seen. Oppressed by this curious consciousness, he looked over his shoulder and saw the figure of a man seated on a rock just above him.

The man sat, with his chin resting on his hands, his elbows upon his knees, so calmly, so absolutely like a statue, that Sutcombe was half-inclined to believe himself the victim of a delusion, so much so that he straightened himself and stared speechlessly at the figure.

He saw that the man was young, but thin and somewhat haggard. He was dressed in quite a rough sea-suit, but his hands, though tanned, like his face, with the sun, and roughened by the water and the wind, were those of a gentleman.
But it was the eyes and not the hands which held Sutcombe's regard, so full of half cynical, half bitter amusement were they.

Sutcombe found his voice at last.
"Hello, sir!" he said, lifting his cap.

The man raised his hat in response.

"Wait!" said Sutcombe, sharply.
His face had grown pale, his eyes keen and suspicious. "Do you mind telling me the name of that other person, sir?"

Mr. Richard Mortimer regarded the flushed face, the suspicious eyes, thoughtfully.

"Yes, I do mind," he replied. "I have an objection."

"It is a woman?" said Sutcombe.

Richard Mortimer's face reddened and his eyes grew darker.

"You are at liberty to guess," he said, curtly.

Sutcombe dropped the spade upon which he had been leaning and advanced a step or two toward the other man.

"The only other person who knows of this island and its wealth is a lady," he said.

"To whom you are indebted for your information—and your fortune."
The retort came like a flash.

Sutcombe reddened again.

"That is true," he said, gravely.
"Her name is Wood, Decima Wood.
You know her?"

Richard Mortimer shook his head.
"I know of no lady bearing that

"Hello, sir!" he said, lifting his cap.

The man raised his hat in response.

"How do you do?" he said, gravely.

"Where—where did you come from?" asked Sutcombe. "I did not see you, know you were there!"

The man jerked his head slowly toward the coast behind him.

"I landed from a fishing-yawl half an hour ago, from that side of the island."

There was silence while one could count twenty; then the newcomer said as quietly and as gravely as before:

"You are gold digging, I presume?"

"I am," replied Sutcombe.

"And you are fortunate, I see."

"I am—very," assented Sutcombe.

"I congratulate you," said the stranger, in a tone which had no trace of envy in it; indeed, it was indicative of an indifference that surprised Sutcombe. "But you would be still more fortunate if you worked further up the valley."

Sutcombe stared at him.

"You—you know the island; have you been here before?"

The faintest and grimmest of smiles shone for a moment in the other man's eyes.

"Yes, I know the island; I have been here before," he said, quietly.

"Is this your first visit?"

Sutcombe nodded.

"Yes. Are you alone, sir?"

"Yes, I am quite alone." He smiled as if he read Sutcombe's fear.

"You need not be afraid. I shall keep your secret. And I have no desire to share in your find. I've no use for gold."

Sutcombe looked at him with amazement.

"That's a strange statement," he said, gravely. "Most men, every man, wants money!"

"Please regard me as the exception which proves the rule," was the courteous response. "Gold is only worth what it will buy; it can buy me nothing that I desire. May I ask to whom I have the pleasure of speaking?"

"My name's Sutcombe," said Sutcombe.

The stranger nodded. "Lord Sutcombe, of Southernwood?"

"Well, yes; Southernwood was mine—I sold it."

"You can now buy it back, Lord Sutcombe, if you desire to do so," said the stranger, looking at the bag of gold. "You are a millionaire—of the English variety. My name is—Richard Mortimer," he added. "I am on a fishing and shooting expedition—a solitary one, and happened to make this island in the course of my cruise. Have you a match upon you?"

Sutcombe handed his match-box.

"May I take half a dozen? Thanks! I must be getting back to my boat." He rose and picked up the gun which had lain at his feet, and raised his wide-brimmed hat. But Sutcombe put out his hand arrestingly.

"One moment, Mr. Mortimer," he said. "You know this island, and the secret of the gold. May I ask if—if any others know of it? I just want to know what to expect."

"No other living person is aware of it—but one," said Richard Mortimer, "and I do not think you have anything to fear from that person. Certainly you have nothing to fear from me. So far as I am concerned you are welcome to the island and all it contains. Good day."

"That is true," he said, gravely. "Her name is Wood, Decima Wood. You know her?"

Richard Mortimer shook his head. "I know of no lady bearing that name," he said. Then, suddenly, his manner changed to one of suppressed eagerness. "She may have borne another. Perhaps you can describe her?"

"She has dark hair and grey eyes—they are sometimes violet. She was wrecked in the Alpina—"

A faint cry rose from Mortimer and he threw up his head as a man does when he has received a sudden shock. Sutcombe smiled bitterly.

"You appear to be startled," he said, sternly. "Shall I go too far if I suggest you know the lady, and that she has reason to regret the day she met you?" He did not need any answer. Instinctively he felt that the man who was the cause of Decima's unhappiness, who held the key to her secret, stood before him. "You also were wrecked in the Alpina. Do you deny it?"

"I assent to, I deny, nothing," said Richard Mortimer. "If—if you can give me any information respecting that lady—"

"I can and will," cut in Sutcombe. "She is well and happy"—oh, Sutcombe!—"and is guarded and watched over by friends who—who will protect her happiness by any and every means—"

The other man stood erect, his tanned face set and stern.

"I presume I may count on you as the lady's chief friend, Lord Sutcombe."

"You may," retorted Sutcombe, promptly. "And that being so, I avail myself of the privilege to tell you that, if you are the man I suspect you to be, you are a heartless scoundrel!"

Vane, otherwise Richard Mortimer, stood for a moment as if turned to stone; then he smiled.

A BLOOD MEDICINE WITHOUT ALCOHOL.

Recently it has been definitely proven by experiments on animals that alcohol lowers the germicidal power of the body and that alcohol paralyzes the white corpuscles of the blood and renders them unable to take up and destroy disease germs. Disease germs cause the death of over one-half of the human race.

A blood medicine, made entirely without alcohol, which is a pure glyceric extract of roots, such as Bloodroot, Queen's root, Golden Seal root, Mandrake and Stone root, has been extensively sold by druggists for the past forty years as Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. The refreshing influence of this extract is like Nature's influence—the blood is bathed in the tonic which gives life to the blood—the vital fires of the body burn brighter and their increased activity consumes the tissue rubbish which has accumulated during the winter.

Dr. R. V. Pierce, the founder of the Invalids' Hotel and Surgical Institute, and a physician of large experience and practice, was the first to make up an ALTERATIVE EXTRACT of roots, without a particle of alcohol or narcotic.

"It is with the greatest of pleasure, that I write to let you know of the great benefit I received from the use of your medicines and self-treatment at home," writes MRS. WM. HEYES, of Ladysmith, B.C. "I suffered for three years from a running sore. Consulted four doctors but they failed to mend or give relief. Finally I was told I was in consumption and would have to consult a specialist concerning my ear, that the dead bone must be cut out before the wound would heal. A kind friend advised me to write to Dr. Pierce, which I did, and after seven months' use of the treatment the sore is healed, and I enjoy better health than I ever did. I dressed the wound with Dr. Pierce's All-Healing Salve and took the 'Golden Medical Discovery' and 'Pleasant Pellets' for my troubles. I shall always recommend your medicines.

SIGN OF THE WIG.

A Queer Little Shop Where Many Barristers Have Dealt.

There is a queer little shop, much of the sort Dickens delighted in, which seems to do a flourishing business near the Temple. To reach the place one travels by way of court-yards and passages, among the little overhanging offices, to the sign of "Law Wig and Robe Maker." In passages close by the guides point out pictures of the old Middle Temple Hall and of the Temple Church and of the dining hall of the Middle Temple. Yonder is Middle Temple Hall, where Shakespeare played "Twelfth Night."

You halt before an array of wigs, set in globes, in a window which projects out under the arches which form part of the series commencing the "squads" of the Temple.

If you are not intending to order, you step into the wig shop timidly. "Would you have a blue bag, sir?" asks the attendant. Ten pounds eighteen shillings, you learn, will get you a bag and a wig, but a very ordinary wig it will be.

If you are a barrister of rather higher pretensions, a king's counsel, you want something better. A king's counsel wears a court wig and silk gown. The gown costs from nine to twelve guineas. The king's counsel whole outfit will cost possibly forty guineas including court suit, wig and gown. Such a man invests in the red bag of a king's counsel, while his bag of old he usually presents to a junior as a mark of respect. Later he becomes attached to a particular red bag and keeps it as long as he can.

Judges have the wig and a green bag. Judges' wigs are substantially one and all the same and come to about thirty dollars.

Most of these wigs are made of horsehair which is first colored a snowy white. It takes about a month to make a judge's wig, although the material can be got ready in six or eight days. The hardest part of the work is the weaving by hand, and even for an expert this is tedious. Experts, moreover, are hard to find, for there are only three of these shops in the world, and all three are in London.

PRESS COMMENTS.

Hamilton Spectator—And so the weary public will have to wade through that noted Michael Fraser case again? Really, their lordships should have more consideration.

Guelph Mercury—One way to get rid of mosquitoes is to let them bite the man who borrows his neighbor's newspaper. Once they get their fill of his blood they shrivel up and pass away.

Montreal Witness—It is easy to divine who governs this country when we are told with such emphasis that no changes are to be made in the way of removing or lowering duties except for the benefit of the manufactures.

The Auditor-General has refused to pay for an automobile and a private car for the use of members of the Borden Government at Ottawa. After this outfit saving the country from annexation this is certainly base ingratitude.

Hamilton Times—The Unionists' press service seems to be making much use of Lord Charles Beresford to defame the navy by allegations that it is 20,000 men short; but Charlie will never be as good a penny-a-liner as a real naval fighter.

Kingston Whig—Bryan and Roosevelt are two of a kind. They both belong to the progressive party which has yet to be found and which, whether republican or democratic, represents the disgruntled elements of all political society.

Edmonton Bulletin—Somebody has cornered the butter market in Ontario. It is satisfactory to outsiders to know that the people of the premier Province are getting what they voted for. It does not seem to be so satisfactory to the people of Ontario.

Hamilton Herald—We observe that under the regulations just issued by the Education Department for the public schools in French districts, French may be taught in all four forms during the school year 1912-13. If vigilance is relaxed that concession will be a permanent one.

THE SHEEP INDUSTRY.

A New Appointment in the Live Stock Branch.

Two years ago the prospect of any extension of sheep raising in Canada appeared very remote. Except in the case of breeders of pure bred flocks, the prevailing attitude regarding the possibilities to be attained through a development of the industry was largely one of indifference and unconcern. To-day, however, a very great change in point of view is manifested, particularly on the part of farmers interested only in the breeding and rearing of market sheep. This change has doubtless been brought about on the one hand by the increasing domestic consumption of mutton and lamb. On the other hand, however it has with equal certainty been hastened and confirmed as a result of the investigations of the Sheep Commission of the problems confronting the sheep farmer in this country and of the manner in which a decadent but attractive business might be revived.

The interest awakened by the latter movement on the part of the Federal Government was further strengthened by the suggestive lectures delivered by Mr. Ritch during the early months of the present year at meetings attended by Messrs. Ritch and MacRae in the provinces of Saskatchewan, Alberta and British Columbia. "The Government is doing something" was the appreciative comment of a Western sheep man, after the conclusion of one of the recent lectures, and this statement is expressive of the temper of sheep growers, both in the East and in the West, who are gratified to know that in their interests something definite is now being undertaken.

An announcement has already been made regarding the action of the Minister in making provision for a special sale during the months of September and October next, of pure bred rams and grade ewes in the Maritime provinces and in British Columbia. It has been ascertained that these provinces have need, not only of selected sires, but also of female stock to serve the foundation of grade flocks for the production of marketable lambs. The co-operation of the Dominion Sheep Breeders' Association has been secured to assist in this work and a grant of $15,000.00 has been made direct to the Association, to be expended for this purpose, in accordance with certain conditions imposed by the Minister. The responsibility for the expenditure of this grant has been delegated to a special committee of the Association, in conjunction with the Secretary, Mr. A. P. Westervelt, and the members of this committee, acting in association with officers of the Live Stock Branch, are at present engaged in selecting the most suitable centres for the holding of the proposed sales. They are also personally securing their interest and co-operation in connection with the sale of the sheep.

Subsequent to the distribution of selected breeding stock in different localities, it is proposed that the appointment of one or more experienced sheep men shall be arranged for who shall spend their time in visiting the farms of those to whom the sheep are sold, in order that the latter may have the benefit of competent advice regarding the management of their flocks, the care of wool, marketing of the clip and disposal of their lamb crop. As the result of this policy, it is believed that these centres will ultimately become distributing points for high class bred

Do you realize it is better to be safe than sorry, that it is the best policy to lock the stable door before the horse is stolen?

Dr. Miles' Heart Remedy cured Mrs. C. C. Gokey, of a stubborn case of heart disease, such as thousands are now suffering with. Read what she says:

"Before I began taking Dr. Miles' Heart Remedy I had been suffering from heart trouble for over five years. I had grown so weak that it was impossible for me to do thirty minutes work in a whole day. I suffered intense pains in my left side and under the left shoulder blade, I could not sleep on the left side, and was so short of breath that I thought I should never be able to take a full breath again. The least excitement would bring on the most distressing palpitation. I had scarcely taken a half-bottle of the Heart Remedy before I could see a marked change in my condition. I began to sleep well, had a good appetite, and improved so rapidly that when I had taken six bottles I was completely cured."

He knows that while the Government of which he is a member is in power and dominated by trade restrictionists there can be no material extension of trade between Great Britain and Canada. There is little doubt that the Minister of Trade and Commerce made his significant statement for the purpose of flanking any Imperial preferential traders in Great Britain who might be inclined to approach him on the subject during his present visit to the United Kingdom.

wool, marketing of the clip and disposal of their lamb crop. As the result of this policy, it is believed that these centres will ultimately become distributing points for high class breeding stock and influential agencies in bringing about an extension of sheep keeping in different provinces.

In consequence of the work initiated by the members of the Sheep Commission, the Minister in receipt, from time to time, of requests for special assistance in connection with certain problems relating to both the sheep and wool industries. The final disbanding of the Commission has made it necessary that definite provision be made for the effective administration of the policy to which the Department is now committed to further the development of the keeping of sheep in Canada. The Minister has, therefore, considered it advisable to arrange for the appointment of a sheep expert to assume charge, under the Live Stock Commissioner, of the work to be undertaken in furtherance of this policy.

He has been fortunate in securing for this position Mr. T. R. Arkell, Professor of Animal Husbandry in the New Hampshire Agricultural College. Mr. Arkell is the son of Henry Arkell, Esq., Arkell, Ontario, the well known breeder of Oxford Down sheep. He received his primary education at the Guelph Collegiate Institute and is a graduate of the Ontario Agricultural College. His early training has made him familiar with every phase of the breeding and management of sheep, and, since his appointment to the position of Professor of Animal Husbandry in the New Hampshire College, he has devoted himself especially to experimental work in feeding and breeding and has made a study, under very advantageous conditions, of problems relating to the production and marketing of wool. He has organized, amongst the farmers of New Hampshire, a co-operative scheme for the sale of their wool clip, and, in addition, has undertaken considerable extension work which has given him very valuable experience. He is now recognized in Canada and in the United States as a specialist in sheep husbandry and has won for his work the attention of some of the most eminent experts in breeding and experimentation.

Mr. Arkell is to join the staff of the Live Stock Branch before the middle of the current month and will proceed immediately to the provinces of Saskatchewan and Alberta to advise with the wool growers regarding the handling of their present season's clip and to make preliminary arrangements for the undertaking of an extensive experimental shipment of Canadian wool to Great Britain in 1913. A systematic collection of wool samples will also be commenced immediately to provide for illustration exhibits of wool, requests for which have already been received from several of our Agricultural Colleges and Winter Fair Boards. A comprehensive effort to systematize and improve the methods employed in connection with the production and sale of wool will, undoubtedly, greatly stimulate a wider interest in the business. This work, therefore, will receive Mr. Arkell's first attention and will constitute the primary step in an active and energetic propaganda which it is hoped may promote the organization of a prosperous and progressive industry.

By and Large. A correspondent asks, "What fool expression 'by and large' is, and what does it mean?" I am scarcely foolish, for the man who invented the phrase was the worst of the past, and by and large opened a new world for the speech of adventure. ## THREEPENNY DAY.

A Curious Old Custom That Is Observed at Eton College.

On "threepenny day" a new threepenny piece is presented to each of the pupils in the famous Eton college in England. The custom was founded nearly 400 years ago by Roger Lupton, who was provost of the college from 1502 to 1535. Lupton arranged with the fellows for an annual distribution of money on the anniversary of his death. The provost received 2s. 8d., the fellows, headmaster and Lupton's chaplain 1s. 4d., the other chaplains and usher eightpence, the clerks sixpence and the scholars and choristers a penny each.

The scholars still get this penny in the threepenny pieces distributed to them on Feb. 27, the other twopence being from the gift of Provost Bost, Lupton's successor as provost. There was a tradition at Eton, which has been disproved, but which subsists to the present day, that half a sheep is what the collegier is really entitled to and that the colleges evade their obligation by giving the value of half a sheep in the middle ages. Some time in the middle of the last century a boy named Charles Henry Branwell, on being tendered his threepence by Bethell, one of the fellows, said:

"No, thank you, sir, I want my half sheep."

"Bethell flew into an awful rage," says the late Montagu Williams, who tells the story, "and exclaimed, 'I'll mention this matter to Dr. Hawtrey and have you flogged,'" and flogged the unfortunate youth was.—New York

THE COST OF LIVING.

You Can Easily Keep It Down if You Care to Try This Plan.

In these days of high prices anxious heads of families are eagerly seeking helpful hints for keeping down expenses. As containing such a suggestion the following story of a gormand
—and sage—of the sultan's realm, told in Hester Donaldson Jenkins' "Behind Turkish Lattices," is hopefully offered:

It is said there was once a man who so dearly loved his evening meal that every day while he worked he did nothing but plan what it should be. At the thought of the viands his mouth would water and he would rejoice over the food that was coming.

One day it occurred to him that he got more enjoyment from the long anticipation than from the brief realization, and then the thought came to him, Why not have the anticipation without spending the money that the dinner had been costing? So he tried the plan.

"I shall have kibobs and fine pilaff tonight," he would assure himself all day, "and after that wire cake and yogurt."

He would lick his lips in happy anticipation while he worked, and when night came he would eat a simple meal

of olives and bread and remark:

"'Tis as if I had eaten."

The plan worked so well that in the course of years he saved enough money to build a mosque, which he called
"The 'Tis-as-if-I-had-Eaten Mosque."

School Discipline.

The young teacher should learn and the older teacher remember that for every teacher that falls on account of lax discipline there is another who falls on account of overgovernment. Some teachers assume the same attitude as the policeman who found two men talking on the street corner and ordered them to move on, as there was an ordinance prohibiting crowds gathering on the streets. One man remonstrated, saying that two did not make a crowd.
"One makes a crowd if I say so," answered the policeman. A teacher who assumes that whatever he says is law, and it is law because he says it, is making a sad mistake. When the pupils have a definite aim to do and the teacher has a definite aim in what he does there will be no time or occasion to "maintain order." It will maintain itself.—Missouri School Journal.

Origin of the Postmark.

Great Britain, it is said, can without fear of contradiction claim the honor of having originated the postmark.
The first one, which was used in London as long ago as 1600, was a very simple affair, consisting of a small circle divided into two parts. In the top portion were two letters indicating the month, while in the lower half the day of the month was shown. No endeavor was made to denote the year, and it is only by the dates of the letters on which the mark is impressed that it is possible to fix the date of its use. The earliest known was on a letter written in 1680.—London Telegraph.

MABEL'S CHITCHAT

The Sash an Attractive Factor In Summer Frocks.

THE NEW PORCH FURNITURE.

Baronial Brown the Latest Approved Shade—Sun Has Less Effect Upon It
Than Green or Paler Tints—Paper Party For the Kiddies.

Dear Elsa—You know, or probably you may not know, what an important factor the sash is going to be on frocks this summer. And for this reason I am sending you news of the latest girdle fixings—the new folded waist bands of soft satin which will be worn with day and evening dresses. A simple sash of this kind that I am making is of broad black satin ribbon merely folded around the waist and fastened at the back, where it is met by a flat panel of the satin stitched on the belt so that it hangs down straight at the back to about twenty inches from the hem of the skirt. This perpendicular panel of the ribbon is bordered with a jet fringe, and I have worked a design in jet beads above the hem of the panel.

Another stunning belt that I am making for a white voile frock is of father heavy white satin ribbon, which goes straight around the waist and finishes at the back in two short ends, each terminating in a point. In each point a design of sun rays is carried out in soft, dull emerald green beads. The sash is bordered with a tiny frilling of emerald green velvet. When making a beaded pattern it is best and easiest to thread the beads on sewing silk, these being carried along the design and sewed to it with another needle threaded with fine silk. Many of the quaint sashes have long tassels of beads at the ends. Indeed, they are reminiscent of the knitted purses of our great-grandmothers' days, which were made of steel beads and finished with long tassels.

Porch Furniture.

You wrote me that you were going to buy green rustic porch furniture. Now, if you want to be in the front rank of fashion get baronial brown, which is a much newer and smarter color. It wears much better, too, the sun having less effect upon it, and even the paper furniture is being stained this rich brown. Paper furniture, you say? Aghast at such a notion? Well, this furniture is not a joke, but a very attractive reality, and very likely you have sat in a paper chair without knowing it and found it quite comfortable at that. You may have taken it for willow, for the two are not unlike in appearance.

The paper is treated by a special chemical process, twisted into strong strands and made up into all kinds of usual shapes in furniture. Then it is stained and given an unusually good coat of a certain brand of varnish, and there you have a handy chair or table of conventional appearance, waterproof, durable and ready for any

FIRE IN THE H

Vessels at Sea Are Often Furnaces Below Decks

Smoldering fires on board common enough and in fact are comparatively harmless, mostly from spontaneous combustion caused by piling large quantities of coal in close quarters.

It is said on excellent authority there is not much danger of fire, hardly any on an iron ship. The first protective measure such an event is to exclude that the fire can only smolder the bunker is flooded with water usually serves to extinguish.

Even in wooden ships a fire from smoldering is not so great as has been pictured to seagoing folk. This is illustrated by the experience of the captain of the Twin Brothers, engaged a week ago in the wheat trade between San Francisco and Liverpool. He was returning from Liverpool with a thousand tons of coal in the hold. Just after it rained it was discovered that there was a fire.

There was a steam pump and after closing the low the crew flooded the hold. The ship had settled about four feet in the water. Then it stood out and let her burn.

Drainage Demonstration.

The Ontario Agricultural College is emphasizing the value of drainage again this summer, for which purpose drainage demonstrations are being held in many parts of the province. On Monday, July 8th, 1912, at the hour of 7 p.m., one of these demonstrations will be held on the farm of Mr. Ross H. Paul, concession 2 lot 6, Ernestown Township. This meeting should be of special interest as some difficult places to drain are involved. Besides the discussion of the particular problems of Mr. Paul's farm, there will be a demonstration of methods of finding the fall over a ditch, determining the grade, digging true to grade, etc. Those of our readers interested in drainage should not miss this meet-

The Airship Here.

The Curtis Aeroplane, to be used by Mr. Havens on Monday next, has arrived and all indications point to a record crowd in Napanee on Monday next. Entries for the horse races are filling well and everything points to a splendid days sport. In addition The Mighty Haag Circus will also be here. Admission to the Driving Park will be 25 cents.

Couldn't Break the Will

Lawyers Could Not Help Disappointed Relatives.

Some disappointed relatives tried recently to break the will of a deceased farmer in Ontario. Their legal advisers told them it would not be difficult, as it was known that the farmer had not consulted a lawyer when making the will.

It seems that he had had some unpleasant experiences with lawyers' fees that had created a decided prejudice in his mind against the entire legal profession. The relatives, however, were doomed to a second disappointment, as it was found that the deceased had used a BAX copyrighted Will Form.

Their lawyer was compelled to advise them that the BAX Will Form is made absolutely in accordance with the law and is indisputable.

The BAX Will Form costs 35 cents, and with each form is included a specimen will and full instructions for your guidance, so that mistakes are impossible.

The BAX Will Form can be obtained at all druggists and stationers at 35 cents, or will be sent on receipt of price by the BAX Will Form Company, 280 College street, Toronto.

For sale by A. E. Paul, Napanee.

Seven pupils from our school tried the entrance examinations at Napanee last week. Some report them easy while others thought them hard.

Mr. Arthur Rose and brother Percy, of Deseronto Road spent an evening recently with Mr. J. Field.

Miss Lena Wagar, Napanee, visited her sister, Mrs. J. Kellar, Sunday.

Miss Elleda Young spent last week at Yarker, the guest of her cousin, Mrs. A. Irish, and other friends.

Mr. W. H. Perry, Toronto, visited his brother, Mr. G. Perry recently, making the trip in his auto.

Mr. Escott Rose, Deseronto Road, visited at Mr. J. Mellow's on Sunday.

stained and given an unusually good coat of a certain brand of varnish, and there you have a handy chair or table of conventional appearance, waterproof, durable and ready for any ordinary usage.

A little oddity in porch furnishings that will come in handy when there are guests on lawn or porch is the lemonade "moat," a sort of wide basket with a handle made of the same material as the rest of the furniture, be it willow, paper or the prairie grass varieties. The "moat" has a large space in the center to hold the lemonade pitcher, jug or thermos bottle and a series of rings—usually about ten—all round this to hold glasses. For an informal lawn party this little contrivance is extremely convenient.

And, in connection with paper, why not give Rosalie on her birthday a "paper party" and you will afford the tots the time of their lives.

All the guests should be asked to wear paper costumes over the plainest of muslin foundations or old substantial dresses, and your favors should be of paper. Naturally if there is a spread for the kiddies—and what would a party be without "eats?"—the table decorations, napkins, ice cases, candy baskets, etc., should be of paper.

A lamp shade costume would be very cute for Rosalie to wear, and a dress of this kind is easy to make, consisting as it does of printed Japanese paper over plain colored frills with a paper ruche to border the bodice and skirt.

Or perhaps you would prefer a "Christmas cracker" dress, which is quite original. This costume has a rather full bodice and plain skirt tied in tightly at the waist with ribbons. The skirt is cut in a deep fringe over a different colored red petticoat, and the sleeves are fringed likewise. Yours devotedly, MABEL.

Needle Points.

When sewing a hem on heavy linen keep a glass of warm water at hand and frequently dip the fingers into it. This will cause the stiffness of the linen to yield, and the work will be found much less difficult.

Accurate placing and pinning together of seams, etc., are most important when making up a dress. The right and left sides, too, must be made to match unless the figure is badly one sided, when a special fitting of both sides will be necessary.

Put the skirt on, fasten it round the waist, then, standing erect, get some one to mark at intervals with a piece of chalk the exact place where the skirt touches the floor. Remove the skirt and turn up the required hem (two or three inches from the ground being a most comfortable length in wear) beyond the chalk mark, measuring carefully all round.

FRUIT SALADS.

Delicious Entrees to Serve at This Time of the Year.

Cherry Salad.—Drain a can of cherries, the large cherries preferred; remove the stones and fill the cavities with cream cheese which has been mixed to a smooth paste and slightly seasoned. Serve on lettuce leaves, using a sufficient number to make a little nest, and garnish with mayonnaise dressing.

Orange Salad.—Take five thin skinned sour oranges and cut in very thin slices, then into quarters. Mix one-third of a cupful of olive oil, one and one-half tablespoonfuls each of lemon juice and vinegar, one-third teaspoonful of salt, a few grains of mustard and a dash of paprika. Marinate the fruit with this mixture and serve on a bed of watercress.

Fruit Salad.—Peel two oranges and remove the pulp separately from each section. Peel three bananas and cut in one-fourth inch slices; remove the seeds and skins from one-half pound of malaga grapes. Break into pieces the meat of fifteen English walnuts. Mix all together and serve on lettuce leaves with French dressing.

With Fruit and Nuts.—Cut into pieces a few bits of cheese, then chop six or eight olives. Break some English walnuts into suitable pieces. Then remove the skins and seeds from a bunch of white grapes; also slice a banana and an orange, adding to the mixture several sweet pickles cut thin. Mix all lightly, adding a little mayonnaise, and serve in apple shells decorated with artificial leaves. For the apples select the prettiest of red ones, polish brightly and scoop out, reserving the top to replace and form a cup.

Fruit Cocktails.—Mix one-third of a cupful of shredded pineapple with one-half cupful of sliced orange pulp and bananas and one cupful of strawberries. Chill thoroughly and serve in glasses, reserving a strawberry for the top of each glass.

SMART DESK FITTINGS.

Anne Boleyn Doll Duster and Animal Penwipers.

Dusters in the shape of attractively dressed dolls with leather brushes concealed beneath their silken skirts are among the unique novelties in writing desk equipments. Lacking a leather duster, which may be made from felt cut into narrow strips, a good sized round paint brush will answer perfectly well, and to the ball of the handle which, of course, must be cut off, may be attached the trunk and head of a doll.

Because of her wide skirts and looped up sack the colonial dame doll is a good design for a desk duster cover, but newer still is the early Victorian dressed doll or the Anne Boleyn. However, any period may be adopted so long as the dress completely covers the feet and is not scant; also of the figure class are the penwipers representing rabbits, cats, lions and elephants.

Montreal Grain and Produce.

MONTREAL, June 24.—Business in all lines of grain over the cable continues very quiet, but there was a fairly good enquiry for oats on spot, for which sellers were asking more money for round lots to arrive, which buyers did not feel disposed to pay, consequently no sales were made. The domestic and export demand for flour continues quiet, but the undertone to the market is strong. Demand for millfeed limited, but a fair trade is passing in rolled oats. Butter is quiet, but the feeling in the market is better. There was an increased demand from the English buyers for cheese, but as the prices bid were in many cases below exporters' views, the volume of business done was small. Eggs fairly active. Provisions steady.

CATTLE MARKETS.

Union Stock Yards.

TORONTO, June 24.—The following prices were paid at the Union Stock Yards to-day:

Choice Exports.

The choice exports ruled the market yesterday at figures from $7.50 to $8.00, 100 being sold to Swift & Co. of Chicago for London and Liverpool markets.

Choice Butchers.

A good quality of butcher cattle, steers generally, above the prime to fair class, sold at figures of from $7.55 to $8.10.

Prime to Fair.

Dealers were paying readily from $7.10 to $7.85 for handsome steers and heifers of grass-fed class, and were eager to take them at this range.

Medium to Common.

All in this class went without parleying at prices from $3 to $6.25, and the entire bunch was cleaned up by noon. The market demands a large number of the cheaper grades every day and at ruling figure yesterday no chance on losing an early

There was no important change in the condition of the market for hogs, prices being firmly maintained on account of the small offerings, with some drovers asking an advance of 15c per cwt., which packers would not pay. The demand was good and finally the market was cleaned up of all the selected lots at $9 to $9.25 per cwt., weighed off cars. Supplies of small meats were larger than usual and the tone of the market was softer, common calves being $1.50 to

QUEER QUITO.

A City With No Chimneys and Where Carriages Are Curiosities.

Travelers in South America see many strange places, but the queerest of all is probably Quito, the capital of the republic of Ecuador. The first thing which strikes a visitor to that city is that there are no chimneys to the houses.

Charcoal is all that is burned there, and consequently no smoke arises. Another peculiarity is that while the streets are well paved you may pass days in the city and never see a wheeled vehicle.

There are some carriages in Quito, but they are rarely used, and when one of them comes rattling along everybody turns out to look at it as at some curiosity.

A third peculiarity is that while the bulk of the population dress in ponchos (a kind of cloak or loose garment) and short linen trousers a considerable number of people—white men—are to be seen walking about and wearing frock coats and tall hats. These men, the visitor is generally told, are enlightened and cultivated men, natives of Spanish origin, who claim that they form the nation of Ecuadorians. Indians, of course, do not count.

Every white man in Quito who can possibly manage it wears this sort of coat and hat to emphasize his importance and highly civilized condition.

This dress justifies him in calling himself doctor and others in so styling him, and he also thinks that it gives him a claim to come into your apartments without being invited and try to borrow 5 cents from you.

How Malta Became European.

Malta underwent a geographical as well as a political change through its acquisition by England in 1814. It had always been regarded as part of Africa, to which it seemed to belong both from topography and language. After its annexation, however, it was discovered that the garrison was entitled to the higher pay granted to troops employed out of Europe and was therefore more privileged than the soldiers in the Ionian Islands. To remedy this parliament passed an act decreeing that so far as pay went Malta should be regarded as part of Europe. It used to be a joke that Malta had become European by act of parliament, and the jest soon became a reality.—London Standard.

All in this class went without parleying at prices from $3 to $8.35, and the entire bunch was cleaned up by noon. The market demands a large number of the cheaper grades every day and at ruling figure yesterday no chance on losing an early bargain was passed.

Cows.

Good, heavy cows were sold at from $5.75 to $6.50, and there was no gnarling at the old ones. Cannors even humped along at the rapid pace of from $3 to $3.50.

Butcher Bulls.

Altho the market was nearly stalled with old and discarded bulls, the price was not prevented from rising steadily, and figures of from $5.25 to $6.50 were paid.

Sheep and Lambs.

The supply was low, not being up to the usual number offered, and prices stiffened. Parcels that weighed, individually, around 120 lbs., went from $4.75 to $5.50. Lambs carried the high figures up to $10 in several instances, with a range of from $9 to $9.60 being recorded.

Montreal Live Stock.

MONTREAL, June 24.—At the Montreal Stock Yards, West End Market, the receipts of live stock for the week ending June 22 were 1900 cattle, 1000 sheep and lambs, 2300 hogs and 1200 calves. The offerings on the market to-day were 1000 cattle, 250 sheep and lambs, 1200 hogs and 500 calves.

The bulk of the cattle offered were grass-fed, as all the stall-fed stock thru-out the country are about exhausted, and as the former have not been feeding long enough to be well finished, the quality was generally poorer than it has been of late. Consequently really choice steers and heifers were scarce and prices ruled firm, but as there was an increased supply of stock the tone of the market was weaker and prices declined 25c to 35c per cwt. A few full car loads of choice grass-fed steers and heifers weighing 1200 pounds each, were bought by local packers at $8.25, and in small lots sales were made as high as $8.50 per cwt. Common cows in full carloads sold at $4.50 to $5 and the top price realized for bulls was $5.50 per cwt.

UGANDA'S ROYAL SUICIDES.

Kings Who Drank Poison When Sick-ness or Age Threatened.

Some of the curious customs of a pastoral people of Uganda, known as the Banyoro, are told by the Rev. John Roscoe. He said that when once a king was enthroned his person became sacred, and his food was restricted to milk and beef from a sacred herd of cows, which were kept apart from other cows.

The Banyoro monarch never allowed himself to grow old or his faculties to become impaired. When he thought he was going to be seriously ill he called a council, arranged the state affairs with the principal chiefs without giving them any reason for thinking that he was about to die and dismissed them to carry out his instructions.

Then he returned to his private house and summoned his chief wife and ordered her to bring a cup of poison. He drank the contents and in a few minutes was dead. The widow thereupon called one or two of the principal chiefs, who prepared the body for burial. For as long as possible the death was kept secret. Each day the milk and beef were brought to the royal residence, and inquirers were informed that the king was suffering from an indisposition which required him to rest.

In the meantime the chiefs were engaged in making private arrangements to guard the body and protect the sacred herds of cattle during the wars which would follow on the announcement of the death. When the news leaked out the sons of the dead king fought among themselves, brother killing brother. The survivor became king and attended his father's funeral.

At the ceremony several of the widows of the deceased king were clubbed to death, as were the cowmen and the cook. Other widows took poison. All the bodies were placed in the grave, the idea being that their ghosts should minister to the ghost of the king in the next world.—London Standard.

BUNCH THEIR WEDDINGS.

Only One Day in the Year For Marriages in Plougastel, Brittany.

In the city of Plougastel, in Brittany, France, all marriages take place on one and the same day. The men are all fishermen, many of them going as far as the Newfoundland banks, and are at home only during a few months in the winter. One day in early February is set apart for the weddings. Little courting is done, but much haggling over the dowry of the girls. They have to bring a certain quantity of linen, chickens, pigs and vegetables. Frequently a match is broken off because the girl's father refuses to add a sack of potatoes to the dowry.

On the day set the inhabitants of the entire region go to Plougastel. The whole population goes to church to hear mass, to take communion and to witness the wedding ceremonies. Often fifty or more couples are united on the same day. Bride and groom do not walk together until the ceremony has been completed. For the rest of this and the whole of the next day every house is open to receive guests and to provide food and drink for them. On the evening of the second day the young men carry the dowries of the brides to

KOREANS ARE GLUTTONS.

Always Ready to Eat and Always Gorge Themselves When They Can.

The Koreans appear to be the greatest eaters in the world. To this the Japanese, French, English, Dutch and Chinese all bear witness. All reports concerning the Korean capacity for food seem to agree. In this respect there is not the least difference between the rich and the poor, the noble and the plebeian. To eat much is an honor in Korea, and the merit of a feast, it would seem, consists not so much in the quality as in the quantity of the food served. Little conversation occurs during the Korean meal, for each sentence might lose a mouthful. A Korean is always ready to eat. He attacks whatever he meets with and rarely cries "Enough." Even between meals he will help himself to anything edible that is offered.

The ordinary portion of a laborer is about a quart of rice, which when cooked makes a good bulk. This, however, is no serious hindrance to his devouring double or treble the quantity when he can get it. Eating matches are common. When an ox is slaughtered and the beef is served up a heaping bowl of the steaming mess does not alarm any guest. When fruits, such as peaches or small melons, are served it is said that they are devoured without peeling. Twenty or thirty peaches are deemed an ordinary allowance per person and rapidly disappear. Such prodigality in food is, however, not common, and for one feast there are many fastings. The Koreans are neither fastidious in their eating nor painstaking in their cooking. Nothing goes to waste. All is grist that comes to the mill in their mouths.—New York Press.

CENTER OF THE EARTH.

It May Be a Mighty Mass of Molten Precious Metals.

Did you ever stop to consider the fact that in all probability the center of the earth is a globe composed of gold, iridium and platinum? These metals are, of course, in a liquid state, the iridium at the exact center—that is, provided there is not some heavier metal at present unknown to man occupying that place—the platinum next and the gold surrounding the other two.

"But," you say, "what proof have we that this proposition is correct?"

In answer I would say:

"Two proofs, and perhaps more."

First, the three metals are the heaviest known substances, compared bulk for bulk. This being the case, they would naturally be attracted to the center of our planet. In the beginning the earth was liquid, if not gaseous. In either case the heavy metals mentioned were held in solution. By gradual condensation the metals settled to the center, iridium first, platinum next and gold last.

Agas ago, when the crust of the earth was thin—very thin—all of the gold now known was thrown out in volcanic eruptions. This last mentioned fact is the second reason for believing that our globe has a golden center, woven around a nucleus of iridium and platinum.

A third reason for believing that there is gold at the center is this: The earth as a whole weighs five times as much as a globe of water of the same bulk, while the rocks forming the outer crust are less than three times as heavy as water.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

The Bernard Sisters

A Mystery That Hung About Them Was Finally Solved

By JEAN WINTER

I lived with my mother and sister in an apartment building and there became acquainted with the Bernard sisters, who occupied a small suit at the other end of the floor on which we were located. They lived very simply and without a maid. Their names were Margaret and Grace, Margaret being the older. Their names expressed their general makeup, Margaret being strong both physically and mentally; Grace gentle and pliable. I supposed at first that they had a small income on which they lived. At any rate, they did not go out regularly each day, as women do who work for their living. But my sister, who was at home all day, said they went out irregularly, usually remaining away from their rooms from two to three hours at a time. She believed they went to keep some business engagement, but they never mentioned where they had been.

Soon after we met them in the apartment house my sister, thinking that they must be lonely sitting by themselves, asked them to come into our rooms. They did so, and we were delighted with them. Both seemed endowed with the same gift, but in different ways. Possessing a keen knowledge of human nature, they could be very entertaining in portraying it in stories taken from their own observations of everyday life. When Margaret told of some woman of high degree, some tragic episode, some thrilling adventure, she threw herself into her part as if she were a professional actress. Grace was equally apt in narrating nature of the crime?"

"Only this: I heard Grace say, moaning all the while: 'On my life, when I went to live with Harry I did not know that he was married. I believed myself to be his lawful wife. When he turned me off I was so sunken that all sense of shame had gone out of me, and when Maynard took me up'—"

I heard no more, for, burying my face in the pillows on my bed, I put my hands to my ears to shut out the rest of the horrid revelation. Betty quietly withdrew and left me to recover from the shock alone, knowing from experience that this was the best way to comfort me. And this was the finale of that blessed contentment which for weeks had been stealing over me, realizing as I did that I loved and was loved; this the girl to whom my affections had gone out! How could she have been able to hear those first tender words I had spoken to her knowing what she was? Had she possessed a spark of real purity she would have winced at being addressed as I addressed her, she knowing the while what she was. Bet had said that she was penitent. Had she grieved for her fall it would have been impossible for her to accept what I had said to her with that modest look on her face. Her self control had been marvelous. But I have always heard that those deepest dyed in iniquity maintain consummate assurance.

What should I do? Not for the world would I meet again the girl who had deceived me. I arose from the bed and began throwing some clothes in a suit case. Bet heard me and returned. She asked me where I was going, and I told her anywhere that would prevent my meeting that shameless girl again. Bet tried to quiet me, but it was no use. I was frantic. Fortunately I couldn't go away that night, for I had not decided where to go. Bet made me promise that I would not go in the morning without seeing her and left me to myself. She brought up my dinner to me, and I managed to swallow a few mouthfuls. After dinner I went out and walked the streets till late, then went in and to bed.

I awoke shortly before daylight with a realization of some frightful trouble hanging over me, but it was not till I had rubbed my eyes that I remembered what it was. Then the whole thing rushed upon me. I went down to breakfast and drank a cup of coffee. I knew that it wouldn't do for me to appear at the office in my present condition of mind, so I telephoned that I was indisposed and would not go down before afternoon. Then I sat down in the library and took up the morning paper. Bet came in and, standing behind me, soothingly put her arms on my shoulders. Then she called my attention to the fact that I was holding the paper upside down. I smiled a sickly smile and reversed it.

About 11 o'clock Bet came to me again with a scared look on her face and said:

"Oh, Henry, there's some awful trouble between those girls. I can hear them plainly in my room. Margaret has been treating Grace so badly that the worm has turned. She's desperate. Margaret is goading her, and she will either go mad or kill her sister or both."

"A Bould Virgin"

She Hoped For Strength From Above, but Got on Well With What She Had

By F. A. MITCHEL

One morning in the year 1660, more than two and a half centuries ago, a young man and a young girl walking side by side passed what was then called the ordinary, afterward the tavern and which we now call hotel, in the village of Hartford, Conn. The ordinary of that day was the central feature of the town. There political affairs were born, discussed; from there domestic news, gossip and scandal were sent forth. Indeed, the ordinary embodied everything in the village.

It was not kept merely for money making purposes. Since a stopping place for travelers was necessary in the town one of the first citizens was invited to take charge of it. The reasons for this were manifold, though the most important was that since liquor must be sold—so it was then considered—and since our ancestors were thoroughly impressed with the abuses liable to this traffic they desired the management of a man they could trust.

"WELL, THERE'S TROUBLE BREWING THERE."

Now, on that morning when the young man and the young woman, Jacob Murline and Sarah Tuttle, passed the ordinary at Hartford within the taproom sat an Englishman who had just made a forty days' voyage from last night the pleasure derived heightened by the gashes on the back being supplied with salt gar. Come, let us finish the fore us and be off."

The landlord and the author work entitled "A Voyage England," with a highly diverting account of the manners and customs of the colonists, published in 1662, drank the remains of the mixture before them—the author grimaced—and proceeded to the house, which was the only shelter for a court exceptionary. They arrived soon prisoner, and the inhabitants of the village were gathering for a few diversions they were offered. Everybody knew Jacob and Sarah Tuttle for a pair of young persons, who were passing a delightful period when love intertwined in each other's arms as the clock is striking the hour away. And now Jacob was in a penalty for their happiness, one knew that there were who had seen them hugging and apparently without thought what was to follow such conduct indulged in without Goodman's consent.

Goodman Tuttle was there, of vengeance, and presently came in with their daughter showed in her visage and denunciations unholily protest against parently. They took seats in front, space behind was filled by the Indians. Then the judge, assembled, asked Goodman to state his charge against Jacob.

"The charge," replied the accuser, "is that Goodman Tuttle is inveigling my daughter's affections. What proof have you to state it?"

"On May day last without my permission the prisoner indulged in boisterous lovemaking with my daughter. It began by his seizing her and demanding the forfeit. Whereupon they sat down, his arm being about her and upon his shoulder or about her neck, and he kissed her, and she kissed him, or they kissed each other, or in this posture for about half an hour."

"Call your witnesses," said the judge. Since this outrage against authority had been committed holiday when all were Maying, there were plenty of witnesses to prove it. Some testified because they were obliged to, but many did so because the town might be accorded the honor of seeing Jacob tied to the gallows post receiving the stroke of the cat-o'-nine-tails. Perhaps those who were selfish enough to testify in order that they might be accorded this amusement. When the testimony was all in Goodman Tuttle, concerning a goodly sum of money from the prisoner for fine, the judge declared that he was participating the pleasure of hearing the howls under the cat-o'-nine-tails much pleased. The spectators getting ready to go out to witness the punishment, and it appeared that nothing could interfere with the making. The judge asked Jacob if he had anything to say for whereupon Sarah Tuttle, who had arisen and said sorrowfully:

"I have something to say, your honor."

"OH, HENRY, THERE'S SOME AWFUL TROUBLE BETWEEN THOSE GIRLS."

events concerning girls of her own kind. Margaret was a Portia, Grace a Juliet.

My favorite of the two sisters was Grace. Margaret was of a pattern to be admired. Grace was lovable. It occurred to me that Margaret was not only a woman of strength, but of violent emotions. I was not surprised one day to hear a storm going on in the sisters' rooms. The doors were all shut, and a window of theirs which faced one of ours was hung with a rug—it seemed to me to prevent sound from being heard. Nevertheless I could hear Margaret Bernard hurling vituperations upon her sister that made my blood curdle. I was tempted to go in and protect the poor girl from her unnatural sister's wrath. I restrained myself, and after the sounds ceased I rejoiced at my forbearance, for when in my sound senses I would never think of interfering in family broils.

Naturally the sympathy I felt for the younger girl drew me closer to her. I did not see her till the next day, when I met her in the hall connecting our and their apartments. It seemed to me that her face should wear a sad expression, but she showed no trace of the "roasting" she had endured. Indeed, she greeted me with a smile, and her smiles were beginning to go straight to my heart. I could not refrain from referring to her sister and was conscious of a frown passing over my face at the mere mention of her, but Grace appeared to be unconscious of any wrong done her by Margaret and spoke of her as usual. This I attributed to her forgiving nature.

But I was soon after destined to receive a shock. One evening when I came in from business my sister came into my room, closed the door behind her and looked at me in a way that told me she had some bad news for me.

"I have noticed your growing attachment for Grace Bernard," she said, "and, considering the mystery that hangs over these girls, I have been very much worried. Some time ago I overheard Margaret violently rating Grace for something, and I took a violent dislike to her for doing so."

"I overheard that, too," I put in.

"Today I overheard another trouble between the two. I could only catch snatches of what was being said, but it was enough to convince me that, after all, Margaret was right. This morning I overheard Grace making the most appalling confession to her sister. Grace seemed so crushed by what she had done, so penitent, so filled with despair, that I found myself weeping for her. And you should have heard how nobly Margaret talked to her. She was motherly as well as sisterly and was as encouraging as could be expected to one who had sunk so deep in shame."

"For heaven's sake!" I exclaimed, horror stricken. "Did you learn the been treating Grace so badly that the worm has turned. She's desperate. Margaret is goading her, and she will either go mad or kill her sister or both. I do think you ought to go in there and stop it."

Springing up, I followed Bet to her room, and, putting my ear close up against the wall where she indicated, I listened. Grace was speaking, but I could only distinguish what she said when she spoke in her highest pitch. Her apparently subdued nature seemed to have been fired by taunting to despair. I listened till I heard Margaret say calmly, "Put down the weapon;" then I bolted for the hall and in another moment was rapping at the Bernard sister's door. Bet followed me, and when the door opened she and I stood on one side of the threshold, while the sisters stood on the other side.

"What's the matter?" asked both girls in a breath.

"Matter! What's the matter here?"

"Nothing."

"Nothing! Are confessed crimes, tauntings, threats at murder?"

I paused. A change was coming over the faces of the two girls. They looked at each other, then burst out laughing.

"Did you hear?"

"Of course we heard!"

"We thought we had the sound deadened. Come in and we will explain."

And they did explain. They sat as models for artists who portray the passions. Just previous to a sitting for any especial part they were accustomed to work themselves up to feel and consequently to look it. They committed to memory scenes in plays and rehearsed them to each other, then went at once to the sitting with the impression fresh. It was these rehearsals we had overheard. There was nothing to be ashamed of in their work, but it was unusual, and persons who knew of it asked so many questions that the sisters became tired of answering them.

I married Miss Grace Bernard and stopped the rehearsals. Her sister soon after married, and numerous artists were disappointed at losing valuable models.

Royal Prerogatives.

Some of the privileges appertaining to the royal prerogative extend to the king's household. His majesty cannot be arrested or sued in the law courts, for "the king can do no wrong" and no servant employed in waiting or attending on the royal presence can be arrested or taken in execution of a civil action unless the permission of the board of green cloth, which regulates the duties of royal officials, be first obtained. This privilege was not instituted for the personal benefit of the servants, but in order that the sovereign might not be put to inconvenience by being deprived of an attendant and also as a mark of respect to the throne.—London Chronicle.

The Eye and the Lash.

Mr. E. C. Hemmerde, K.C., was once cross-examining a rather prominent man in a case that is memorable only for a brilliant retort made by counsel.

Mr. Hemmerde pressed the witness so hard that at last he asked rather plaintively, "Why should I be placed under the lash like this because my name is fairly well known?"

Instantly came Mr. Hemmerde's retort, "A man who is in the public eye must always be under the lash!"— cob Murline and Sarah Tuttle, passed the ordinary at Hartford within the taproom sat an Englishman who had just made a forty days' voyage from London to America for the purpose of studying the manners and customs of the colonists with the intention of writing a book about them on his return. He was sitting with the landlord, who had just brewed a bowl of flip, a concoction of beer sweetened with sugar, molasses or dried pumpkin and rum, into which had been thrust a red-hot iron called the logger-head, causing it to seethe and foam. The landlord was giving his guest some account of the said manners and customs in vogue in the colony of New Haven.

"Do you see that girl walking with that young man? Well, there's trouble brewing there. The girl is old Goodman Tuttle's daughter, and she's keeping company with young Murline without her father's permission. He'll get fined a dozen lashes at the whipping post if he doesn't mind."

"The whipping post! Have parents power here to whip those who pay attention to their daughters without their consent?"

"Indeed they have, and a goodly custom it is. The laws of the colony say that any tempting without the parents' sanction cannot be done by speech, writing message, company keeping, unnecessary familiarity, disorderly night meetings, sinful dalliance, gifts or in any other way."

"And if they disobey this law?"

"Heavy fines may be imposed with a plentiful supply of lashes to the inveigler of the girl."

"And is she not punished?"

"Not by the law. Her father can attend to her case as he likes."

"Is the punishment in public or in private?"

"In public, of course. We have no private punishment here in the colonies. Heaven knows there are in this desolate land few amusements. Our punishments serve us in this respect in good stead. When I was in Boston last, drinking with others a cup of sack, we were much diverted at seeing a man who had had too much of the same mixture laid by the heels on the ground, with a bar of iron fastened and locked to his legs with sliding shackles and a bolt. There were salvages (savages) present who stared at him, not understanding this method of torture."

While the two were talking Jacob Murline, who had passed with his love out of sight, repassed, going the other way, and under very different conditions. A citizen held one arm, another citizen held the other arm, while Goodman Tuttle, the father of the girl he had been walking with, led the way. On Tuttle's visage was a stern and relentless look that boded the prisoner no good.

"Now," said the landlord of the Hartford ordinary, "you have an opportunity to witness one of our customs, showing how parents discharge the duties the Lord has imposed upon them in the case of their offspring. They will take the boy to the magistrate, where he will be tried for inveigling the girl, and later you may derive much pleasure at seeing the cat o' nine tails laid on his back. And mayhap if the judge has not had sufficient sack this morning to steady his nerves and replenish his temper after the five bowls he had here

The first farmer was the first man, and all historic nobility rests on possession and use of land.

IN the selection of land for a dairy farm some essential points must be considered. If a choice of soil is to be had a rich clay loam, easily drained, is the most preferable. Rough, cheap land is often used to advantage for pasture purposes, but more and more is intensive farming becoming popular, even to the extent of having a cow to each acre of land.

There must be a plentiful supply of good water all the year, and it should be convenient.

Another necessary consideration is a good market near at hand or convenient transportation facilities. The importance of good roads is no small consideration.

To be a successful dairyman a man must first be a successful farmer. He must understand soil conditions and the growing of crops. In other words, he must have a good farm well farmed, as well as a good herd well cared for.

Rundown Farms Made Profitable.

Every crop grown on the farm has a value as a fertilizer and when sold permanently removes that amount of fertilizing matter from the farm. Very often an intelligent, industrious man makes a profitable investment by buying a rundown farm at a low figure and stocking it with dairy cattle. By returning the manure in good condition to the land he makes the exhausted soil become rich and raise good crops in a few years.

A study of the following table explains why poor, run-out farms are built up by dairying. The figures show the amount of money received for the products sold and the value of the fertilizing constituents removed from the farm, based on nitrogen being worth 12 cents per pound, phosphoric acid 1½ cents and potash 4½ cents.

was good." The Creator of all things knew that light was good. We know it is good. Then why shut it out of our cow stables? Did you ever see a stable without a window? I have seen many.

Fifteen minutes of direct sunshine bring death to most of the disease germs. When we have such a powerful disinfectant free let us use it abundantly. Have plenty of windows in the stable. Let the sunlight get directly in on all sides if possible. Many have the windows hinged on the lower side and have them open inward from the top. This prevents a direct draft on the cows. Keep the windows free from cobwebs and wash them off occasionally.

It is easier to regulate the light than it is to ventilate properly. If we wish animals to remain healthy they must have pure air to breathe. This means that the foul air from the lungs and odors from food and excretions must escape and be replaced by fresh air. Thousands of animals are yearly becoming affected with tuberculosis, due to insanitary conditions. Effective ventilation is of infinitely greater value than tuberculin. The first prevents the disease; the other only reveals its presence. There should be at least 500 cubic feet of air space for each cow.

Means of letting the air into the stable at or near the ceiling will usually prove best. The air taken in will, by reason of being cold, tend to fall to the floor and thus produce air movements which will keep the air within

MAKING ARTIFICIAL FLOWERS.

A Pleasant and Profitable Employment For Women.

Now that artificial flowers made of ribbon are so much in vogue many women will find it not only pleasant, but also profitable work to make them for sale. Roses, daisies and morning glories are easily made and are pretty for millinery purposes, hair ornaments, novelties for the neck, trimming for evening dresses, etc.

The large size rosebuds make beautiful hatpin heads and are made by using five squares of soft satin ribbon or messaline silk three and a half inches in diameter. Each square is formed into a petal by first bringing together the upper right hand and the lower left hand corners, then the upper left hand and the lower right hand corners. Lastly, bring together the two lower corners and you have a complete triangle, which when gathered tightly at the bottom forms the petal.

Two of the petals are placed closely together, forming the center of the bud, and the remaining three are placed in a row around the center. Sew tightly at the bottom, then use green ribbon three-fourths of an inch wide for the lower part of the bud.

The full blown roses are made by having the outer row of petals made like loops, with the upper corners slightly folded in.

The tiny buds, which are used in clusters for dress trimming and other purposes, are made just as a single petal of the larger buds; but, of course, smaller squares are used. Morning glories are made by using for each flower a piece of ribbon four inches long and two and a half inches wide.

Health Rules.

Gaining and retaining health is simply understanding and observing the laws that govern and regulate the human body. The following exact precepts taken from great authorities should be of material assistance to one who is tired of being sick:

Never drink during meals.

Drink at least three glasses of water with each meal.

Eat only the simplest food.

Eat whatever you want to. Nature has given man his taste for a guide.

Sleep at least eight hours out of the twenty-four.

Do not sleep over five hours. It is a waste of time and of vital tissue.

Never call a prizefighter a liar.

Call a prizefighter what you please, but over the telephone.

By following these simple laws carefully, being particular not to deviate from any one of them in the slightest degree, you should soon be so healthy, that you will not know yourself. Neither will anybody else know you.

I heard an old Scotchman, who proved it true, say many times there were only two things for which a farmer should mortgage his farm—first, to drain the land properly so as to raise good crops, for prosperity cannot rise from wet, cold soil—the land must be drained; second, to build good barns in which to house the stock and crops. These two conditions, rightly managed, will erect a fine home and make a comfortable bank account.

"Let There Be Light."

I wish space permitted a lengthy discussion on the construction of the cow stable. It does seem to me that the health of the cows and the purity of the milk depend greatly on the stable. Four things are of prime importance—sunlight, pure air, tight, dry floors and the comfort of the animals.

The first recorded utterance of God is, "Let there be light," and further it is stated, "God saw the light that it

 First neatly join the ends, then double the ribbon so as to make both edges meet. Gather along the joined edges which form the cup, and the centers can be made with several strands of yellow silk thread. No. 2 ribbon is used for the daisies. ### ATTRACTIVE APRONS.

Dutch Designs Form Charming Borders on New Models.

No longer does the white apron of transparent materials trimmed with frivolous ribbons and many lace frills reign supreme as a skirt protector at chaffing dish parties. For the nonce the Dutch apron is in possession of the field, and every girl who cannot afford one of the imported specimens made of dark blue, green, yellow or red sateen, with a printed border in a contrasting dull hue that is half the depth of the entire accessory does the next best thing and makes her apron of whatever material she has at hand.

The border, printed Holland sateen, is about twenty-four inches wide and has the decoration along edge and shirring it three times across, thus forming a half inch frill and two half inch deep puffs against the front of the waist.

The Dutch apron has no strings, but is secured to the belt by fancy pins, preferably of Dutch silver and hand-work.

But materials other than the imported Holland sateen are used, and many girls prefer the transparent tabliers of dark hued chiffon or mousseline de sole with a wide printed border, while other apron makers are applying the borders of foulards to plain colored surah or china silks.

The main thing is to have the foundation of the apron—never longer than twenty inches when finished—of a dark and dull shade and the border of a decided pattern and an entirely different color.

Staining Wood Dark Hue.

The appearance of walnut may be given to white woods by painting or sponging them with a concentrated warm solution of permanganate of potassa. The effect is different on different kinds of timber, some becoming stained very rapidly, others requiring more time for this result. The permanganate is decomposed by the woody fiber. Brown peroxide of manganese is precipitated, which is afterward removed by washing with water. The wood, when dry, may be varnished and will be found to resemble very closely the naturally dark woods.—Harper's Magazine.

An Aristocratic Bank.

All the clerks at Coutts' bank in London, where the king and members of the royal family have accounts, must be clean shaven and wear frock coats during banking hours. No bank in the world has so many aristocratic customers as Coutts'. Practically every member of the house of lords banks at the famous house in the Strand, and no other English bank has so many foreign aristocrats on its books.

KNIGHTS WELCOMED.

Catholic Order Gets Good Reception In Toronto.

Toronto, June 25.—The great parade is over, in which 2,500 Knights of St. John marched blithely over a long and hot route through the streets, watched and cheered by the ladies of the auxiliaries of the order and thousands of curious and interested citizens. To-day the big convention gets down to business at St. Mary's Hall, Bathurst and Adelaide street, after attending a solemn requiem mass at St. Michael's Cathedral, to be said for the souls of departed knights.

Yesterday morning the convention was opened by Pontifical High Mass said at the cathedral by Rev. Father Kidd, administrator of the diocese. The great building was crowded. After mass the knights and ladies moved to the Normal School grounds where a photograph was taken, and whence they went to Canadian Foresters' Hall in College street, where they received addresses of welcome. Vicar-General McCann told them that they had a high and exalted work in the betterment of men, wherefore the doors of the church were opened to them. He was followed by Mayor Geary, who made them free of the city, which welcome was endorsed by Ald. McGuire, chairman of the reception committee of the City Council.

At 3 o'clock in the afternoon the knights, arrayed in full regalia and bearing streaming banners, formed for the great parade, at Queen's Park and with each commandery headed by its own or one of the city bands, the procession moved away over its long march. With their smart uniforms they made a most creditable appearance. The men marched with the order and precision of the military.

FORTY DEAD AT LEAST

Casualty List in Wharf Disaster
Has Grown.

Twenty-One Bodies Have Thus Far
Been Recovered at Eagle Park,
Grand Island, and as Many More
Are Said to Be Missing — Boats Sent Down the River in the Hope of Finding More Bodies.

Niagara Falls, Ont., June 25.—At least forty people were drowned when the pier at Eagle Park, Grand Island, collapsed Saturday night, the authorities believe. The victims were all Buffalo people. Twenty-one bodies have been recovered at latest reports. A close watch is being kept below, as well as above the falls for bodies.

The identified dead are: Mrs. Arthur Mayer, Mrs. John Hayes, Mrs. Lillie Kellogg, Celia Kelly (9 years old), Mrs. Agnes S. Gallagher, Miss Catherine Wolff, Miss Irene Thomas, Miss Alice Griffiths (17 years old), Flora A.
Helstrom (5 years), Miss Georgie Seeds (28 years), Alfred Finn (23 years), Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Snyder (22 and 21 years), Miss May Gretch (22 years), Clara Schultz (42 years), Miss Annie Fremeng (22 years).

Missing: Mrs. A. L. Helstrom (34 years), Miss Nellie Goodwell (22 years), Edna Leidhisser (15 years), Mrs. George McKee and 10-year-old daughter, Mrs. George Richmeyer, Norman Richmeyer (10 years), Miss Christine Wacker (20 years), Mrs.
George Nestor (31 years), Mary Nester (13 years), Miss Violet Senf (16 years), Mrs. Edward Westphal (25 years), Mrs. Grace Heide (25 years), and Nora Meyers (4 years).

Boats were sent down the river from Eagle Park early yesterday to recover bodies. A mile below the landing there is a reef running several hundred feet out into the river, which,
with a shore swing of the current,
forms a natural basin, and into this it is believed that the bodies will be carried.

There is some difference in the stories of eye-witnesses as to whether the boats contributed to the collapse of the dock by striking it when they came in, or whether it sank under the sheer weight of the people standing on it. Skipper Fix declared yesterday that there was no perceptible jar when he warped in. He had lines over two of the snubbing posts, but the pressure on these was not great,
as he was steaming slowly against the current, which was also aiding in the swing toward the shore.

McGovern Explains.

Madison, Wis., June 25.—Cenator
La Follette's defeat in the Chicago convention was attributed by Governor F. E. McGovern yesterday afternoon to the 'mismanagement of his campaign—a mismanagement that was well-nigh criminal."

The governor said that Walter L.
Houser, La Follette's campaign manager, is "responsible for the election of Senator Root and so of the whole calvacade of calamity that followed."

Governor McGovern, in a long statement in justification of his candidacy for temporary chairman of the national convention, presented figures tending to show that had he been named chairman, the net Taft strength would have been 480, and the

Did Parnell Die?

The simplest and only really effective way to avoid all earthly troubles, is to die. And the next best method is to appear to die. History is full of instances of prominent men who,
either to foil their enemies, or to avoid the consequences of some rash act, quietly disappeared and settled off in some far country after their faithful followers had buried them in effigy with full ceremony.

Indeed, there is a story to the effect that Charles Stuart Parnell, the great Irishman, lived long after he had died. Throughout Ireland an impression prevails among the peasantry that the celebrated leader and statesman, is still in the land of the living, and during the South African war it used to be related among the poorer classes of the Emerald Isle that he was identical with the elusive and mysterious Boer general, De Wet.

It is alleged that Parnell, when he found that by marrying Mrs. O'Shea
he had not made, but marred the position of the ambitious and wonderfully brilliant woman to whom he had been so devotedly attached; when he realized that he could no longer rely upon the loyalty and discipline of his followers; and he became convinced that his existence after the scandal in connection with the O'Shea divorce constituted a source of weakness to the cause of his beloved country, which would derive advantage from his disappearance—he resolved to vanish, either forever, or at any rate until such time when Ireland had obtained her own government.

It is added that the coffin purporting to contain his remains holds nothing but a mere lay figure, or sand,
and that, having shaved off his beard,
he had made his escape in the guise
of a priest without any difficulty whatever.

A Weird Old House.

There is an old manor house at Knaresborough, England, parts of which were built 700 years ago. It is a fine place, with magnificent paneling in the rooms, a bedstead in which Cromwell once slept, a priests' hiding place and a ghost. The priests' hiding place is concealed by a spring door.
The present occupant of the house says that during the night sounds of footsteps are heard on the landing, and it is impossible to keep the door of this room closed. On one occasion the footsteps were accompanied by a loud bump at the door of another room. During some recent restorations the skeleton of a woman was found buried at the foot of a staircase.

Lancaster Off to England.

Ottawa, June 25.—E. A. Lancaster,
M.P., author of the marriage bill which the Supreme Court declared unconstitutional, will go to England for the Privy Council appeal. He was in Ottawa yesterday seeing the Premier and Hon. C. J. Doherty in an effort to have the appeal brought on in July.

ENJOYING THE BEST OF HEALTH

"Fruit-a-lives" Cured His Rheumatism

Prof. J. F. Davis

563 CHURCH ST., TORONTO.

I want to say to the people of Toronto and elsewhere that "Fruit-a-lives" is my only medicine and has been for the last four years. Previous to that, I had been very much troubled with Rheumatism and Kidney Disease, and had taken many remedies as well as employing hot applications of salt bags etc., without getting satisfactory results.

Noticing the advertisement of "Fruita-lives", I adopted this treatment altogether and, as everybody knows, since taking "Fruit-a-lives", I have been enjoying the very best health and find it a pleasure to follow my vocation of Dancing and Deportment Instruction".

Prof. J. F. Davis.

Prof. Davis, the celebrated teacher of dancing and deportment in Toronto, is quite frank in stating that "Fruit-a-lives" alone cured him of distressing Rheumatism and Kidney Trouble.

Mrs. Pankhurst Almost Died.

London, June 25.—Mrs. Pethick
Lawrence was released from Holloway Jail yesterday afternoon.

Miss Annie Kenny, who has been directing the Women's Social and Political Union during the imprisonment of the suffragist leaders, announces that Mrs. Pankhurst was released because she was found on Sunday night to be at the point of death.
All attempts to forcibly feed her had failed.

Reginald McKenna, Home Secretary, admits that Mrs. Pankhurst's heart was too weak to permit of forced feeding.

Accused Pleads Guilty.

Toronto, June 25.—Pleading guilty to robbing and assaulting Wm. Cale, a drug clerk, in Lambton Mills last Wednesday, Albert Phillips, an em- ployee of the Swift Company, was re- manded till Friday by Magistrate Ward in the county police court yester- day. The remand was made for the purpose of allowing the prisoner to produce character evidence. Phillips and Cale had been drinking together in the Lambton Mills Hotel on Wed- nesday night, after which they walked to a nearby field, where it is alleged, that Phillips turned on his erstwhile pal and assaulted and robbed him of a watch, fob, camera, ring and tie pin.

Seven Shot In Strike Trouble.

Hastings-on-the-Hudson, N.Y., June 25.—Seven persons, including a wo- man and a small boy, were shot yester- day afternoon in a clash between strikers and special deputies guard- ing the National Conduit & Cable Co.'s works, where a strike has been in progress for some time.

The woman was probably mortally wounded and all the others are in a serious condition.

The others wounded were strikers or sympathizers. So far as could be learned the shots were fired by the guards and not returned by the strik- ers. The small boy injured was play- ing in the streets.

Judgment Withheld a Month.

Washington, June 25.—After Samuel Gompers, president of the American Federation of Labor, had been sen- tenced yesterday in the contempt case, he attacked the decision, de- claring that while Justice Wright lives in our time, his decision and sentences disclose a mental concept of more than two centuries ago when the workman was either a slave or a serf.

"Information just came to me that the decision was completed more than a month ago, but withheld until af- ter the close of the Chicago Republi- can National Convention. If true, the inference is obvious."

Gaynor Boom Is On.

New York, June 25.—Gaynor sup- porters, 200 strong, got away from the Pennsylvania station for Baltimore yesterday morning in a special train of five cars. Four special trains took the Tammany hosts.

Jacob A. Cantor headed the Gaynor delegation, and each member carried a large umbrella bearing a likeness of the mayor. These will be opened when th boomers march from the sta- tion to their hotel. Badges with the inscription: For President; he can win," were also conspicuous.

Find of Natural Gas.

Montreal, June 25.—The Grand Trunk officials announced yesterday morning that word had been received from Tofield, a point on the Grand Trunk Pacific forty-one miles from Edmonton, that natural gas in large quantities had been found there. Re- cently coal was discovered in this lo- cality.

Canada Was Fourth.

London, June 25.—At the London Horse Shaw, Russia was winner of the Edward VII. Cup, France was second, England third and Canada fourth.

The wedding was very quiet only a few of the friends of the contracting parties being present. The ceremony was performed by Rev. J. P. Wilson, B. A. The bride was a valued employee of Mr. J. L. Boyes and a popular young lady and The Express joins with her many friends in wishing the young couple a long and happy married life. Mr. and Mrs. Holder will reside in Kingston.

Drowning Accident.

Archibald H. Matthews, a young man about 20 years of age, was drowned in the Napanee river near Mink's Bridge on Sunday last. Deceased in company with his younger brother, a lad of six years of age, were bathing and the older lad had walked across the river on the shallow rock. The younger lad pushed their boat off from the shore towards his brother and it is thought that in wading after the boat the deceased stepped into deep water and being unable to swim was drowned. The body was recovered a couple of hours afterward.

ST. MARY VS. WESTERN.

Monday evening's contest between St. Mary and Western church teams was an exciting contest, and furnished some interesting incidents, from a spectator's point of view, up to the sixth innings when darkness intervened and stopped the play. In the first three innings the Western lads put it all over St. Mary, and the early lead thus gained saved the game for them. After the third innings the St. Mary boys kept their opponents stepping lively all the time.

The keen rivalry between the teams has led to roughness creeping into the game, and although it may be unintentional, for the good of the game all tatics of this nature should be eliminated. A word from the managers of the different teams should be sufficient, and the remedy thus applied will have a tendency to increase the already great interest taken in these series of games by the citizens. Following are the players, their positions, and the score:

Brutal Conduct.

"But why are you determined to get a divorce from your husband?"

"Because he is an absolute brute."

"You amaze me. You used to say that he was as gentle as a child."

"Yes, that's what I used to say. But you ought to see him now! Listen!

Since the baby began teething nothing would quiet the little darling but being allowed to pull his papa's whiskers.

And when he found that out what do you think he did? He went down and had his beard shaved off, that's what!

Do you think I'd live with a man that has that sort of disposition?"—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

The Hamburg Stock Exchange.

The public rooms of the Hamburg
boerse, subject to very mild rules conducive to good order, are open to all,
with very few exceptions. Their use is definitely forbidden "to all female persons," to individuals who have been deprived of their civic rights, who are under some form of judicial restraint, who have been adjudged guilty of fraudulent bankruptcy, persons adjudged to be in simple bankruptcy,
those unable to meet their obligations and such as are forbidden the use of the boerse through the decision of the court of honor.

Disguised His Vocation.

"What is your occupation?" asked the good woman as she handed out the fourth roast beef sandwich.

"I am an ex-pounder, madam. My delivery has become impaired and I find it very difficult to get a bout," answered the weary traveler.

Thereupon the one time pugilist took his leave and the good woman murmured, "Poor fellow!"—Judge.

Might Have Got More.

"I always have hard luck."

"What's the matter now?"

"I borrowed a dollar from my wife yesterday, and she had to break a five dollar bill to let me have it."—Detroit Free Press.
